

Transition to retirement

This fact sheet is for UniSuper members considering a Flexi Pension under the government's transition to retirement rules.

What is transition to retirement?

Transition to retirement, or 'TTR', is a government initiative that lets you access your super while you're working. You can start a TTR Flexi Pension if you've attained your preservation age. Once you reach age 65 or if you let us know that you've met a condition of release allowing unrestricted access to your super (e.g. retired from the workforce or terminated an arrangement of employment after age 60), your TTR Flexi Pension will cease to be paid under the TTR rules and will become a Retirement Phase Flexi Pension.

If you qualify, there are two ways to use the TTR rules:

1. Keep working and boost your super – even if you're not contemplating retirement, the TTR rules enable you to maintain your current level of work, access a retirement income, and increase your salary sacrifice contributions into your super. The strategy can even be structured so there is no effect on your take-home income.
2. Transition gradually into retirement – you can gradually reduce work hours and ease into retirement, while supplementing your income from your super.

- The total amount of retirement income you can receive from a TTR Flexi Pension account in a financial year must be between the minimum and maximum percentages of your account balance required by legislation (these are calculated at the commencement of your account and on 1 July each year).
- When you turn 65 or you notify UniSuper that another relevant condition of release has been met, your TTR Flexi Pension will automatically become a Retirement Phase Flexi Pension—meaning investment earnings will be tax-free and administration fees and costs and investment fees and costs will be charged as a standard Flexi Pension member.
- A TTR Flexi Pension can be started once you reach your preservation age.

DATE OF BIRTH	PRESERVATION AGE
Before 1 July 1960	55
1 July 1960 – 30 June 1961	56
1 July 1961 – 30 June 1962	57
1 July 1962 – 30 June 1963	58
1 July 1963 – 30 June 1964	59
1 July 1964 or after	60

The rules for transition to retirement

- A TTR Flexi Pension must be purchased with money already in your super account.
- While operating a Flexi Pension under TTR rules you'll have two accounts for your retirement savings – your existing super account and your new TTR Flexi Pension account. Your super account remains open so your employer can make employer and salary sacrifice contributions into it along with any voluntary member contributions you may want to make.
- Lump sum withdrawals (called commutations) aren't generally allowed. A TTR Flexi Pension is a non-commutable retirement income product. In all other ways they are structured like ordinary account-based pensions.

An important note for Defined Benefit Division (DBD) members

If you use any of your defined benefit (DB) component to start a TTR Flexi Pension, you'll cease to be a DBD member and will become an Accumulation 2 member. To find out how converting to Accumulation 2 will impact your inbuilt benefits, read the Defined Benefit Division and Accumulation 2 PDS available from our website.

Your transferred DB component will be invested according to the future contributions strategy for your accumulation component. If you don't have a future contributions strategy, your transferred DB component will be invested in the Balanced investment option. The investment options applicable to your accumulation component (if any) will not change.

If you don't want to use your DB component but still want to start a TTR Flexi Pension, you can start one using your accumulation component only. If you use your accumulation component, you'll remain a DBD member and retain your DB entitlements. If you use only a part of your accumulation component, you must leave a minimum balance of $6,000 in your account.

ARE MY INBUILT BENEFITS OR INSURANCE COVER AFFECTED?

If you're a DBD member and you use your accumulation component only to start a TTR Flexi Pension, your inbuilt benefits won't be impacted. Any insurance cover you have through your accumulation component will continue, so long as you continue to meet the requirements in the group insurance policies and the balance of your accumulation component is sufficient to cover premiums.

If you use your DB component to start a TTR Flexi Pension, your inbuilt benefits will cease. You may be eligible to elect to receive transitioned Death, Total and Permanent Disablement (TPD) and Income Protection cover to replace your inbuilt benefits through our insurer—subject to satisfying eligibility criteria, terms and conditions and the automatic acceptance limits.* Before using your DB component to start a TTR Flexi Pension, please read the PDS and the Insurance in your super document available on our website. Any existing insurance you may have through your accumulation component will continue and premiums will continue to be deducted from that account.

TTR for Accumulation 1, 2, and Personal Account members

If eligible, you can elect to use part of your account balance to start a TTR Flexi Pension. You must leave a minimum balance of $6,000 in your super account. All future employer and member contributions will continue to be paid into your super account.

Opening a TTR Flexi Pension won't impact any insurance cover you have through your account. Your cover will continue so long as you continue to meet the requirements in the group policies and your account balance is sufficient to cover premiums.

Will the number of hours I work affect my eligibility for a TTR Flexi Pension

The Government has not specified any minimum or maximum number of hours you must work to start a TTR Flexi Pension.

You can continue working on either a full-time or part-time basis. The number of hours you work is a decision to be made between you and your employer.

Can I make a lump sum withdrawal?

Lump sum withdrawals can only be made from a TTR Flexi Pension to:

- access any unrestricted non-preserved benefits
- give effect to a Family Law payment split, or
- give effect to an ATO release authority under income tax legislation.

You can commute or roll over your pension at any time to purchase another TTR Flexi Pension or return the benefit to an accumulation super account.

Once you meet a relevant condition of release—such as permanently retiring from the workforce after preservation age, leaving an arrangement of employment after age 60, or reaching age 65—the restrictions no longer apply and you can make a lump sum withdrawal at any time.

How is the pension taxed?

If you're aged between 55 and 60, the amount of income drawn from your TTR Flexi Pension (excluding the tax-free component) is included in your assessable income and taxed at your marginal tax rate. A 15% tax offset is available to reduce the tax payable on the taxable portion of your TTR Flexi Pension income. If you're aged 60 or older, you'll receive your TTR Flexi Pension payments tax-free. Investment earnings on a TTR Flexi Pension are taxed up to 15%.

Are there any additional fees?

There are no administration fees charged for a TTR Flexi Pension. For more information on the other types of fees and costs that apply, and the circumstances in which a TTR Flexi Pension ceases to be paid under TTR rules, refer to the product disclosure statement on our website.

You can view the current investment fees and transaction costs at unisuper.com.au/investment-costs. When you fully retire and you're no longer a TTR Flexi Pension member, the standard Flexi Pension fees will apply.

Other things to consider

We recommend reading the Flexi Pension Product Disclosure Statement (PDS) before making your decision about starting a TTR Flexi Pension.

You can also read about who the Flexi Pension has been designed for in the Target Market Determination available at unisuper.com.au/important-information.

If you reach age 65 or notify us that you've met a relevant condition of release, tax will no longer apply to investment earnings on a TTR Flexi Pension unless you exceed your personal transfer balance cap. Your TTR Flexi Pension will then be treated as a standard retirement phase pension and the standard fees for a Flexi Pension and the transfer balance cap will apply.

We encourage you to be mindful of the caps on the total amount of super you can hold in the retirement phase, known as your 'personal transfer balance cap'. This cap will be between $1.6 million and $1.9 million, depending on your circumstances. To view your transfer balance cap and your transfer balance account, contact the ATO or log in to the ATO's online services. There are penalties for excess transfer balances. TTR Flexi Pension accounts don't count towards your personal transfer balance cap. However, if you meet a relevant condition of release and your account is converted to a Retirement Phase Flexi Pension, you may need to reduce your account balance, depending on your personal transfer balance cap.

Get advice

Generally, the most important factors affecting how suitable a TTR Flexi Pension is for you include: your age, your marginal tax rate and how long it will be until you permanently retire. You should also take into account your lifestyle considerations such as, deciding if you're ready to decrease your working hours, and whether your employer will allow you to reduce your hours.

Making decisions about your super can be complex for some members, especially if you're not confident about how your choices will impact your future savings. We recommend seeking financial advice before deciding if a TTR Flexi Pension is right for you.
